Urges U.S. Haven Backed By Fellow Jews

A temporary asylum in the United States for Jewish refugees from Nazi Europe, underwritten by American Jews, was proposed by Herbert Hoffman, of New York, grandnephew of the late president Calvin Bella Abraham at the eighty fifty-seventh annual convention at the Steel Pier, Atlantic City, N.J. Five hundred delegates attended.

Under Mr. Hoffman's proposal, Jewish refugees would be permitted to settle in vacated Army camps and hospitals still on thousands of unoccupied acres of land in the country for the duration of the war, returning to their homelands when it was safe.

In a message read at the convention President Roosevelt declared that the object of Nazi persecution, "Victory Over Tyranny," against the only chance for establishment of permanent peace, which he said could be achieved only if "just and stable conceptions of the world and the principles of the good neighbor."

The Convention also heard reports of the Union [illegible] which [illegible] Jewish [illegible] Jewish [illegible] Jewish [illegible] Fifth War Loan Drive."

Says Anti-Jewish Nazi Fury Continues

President Roosevelt, amplifying Congress necessity of his action in setting up a camp for 1,000 war refugees at Fort Ontario, Oswego, N.Y., declared that the Nazis, with defeat in the near approaching, were determined to complete their plans to exterminate completely the Jews in Europe.

"At the hour of the final defeat of the Hitlerite forces draws closer," he said in a special message to the Congress, "the fury of Nazi hatred seeking to wipe out the Jewish race in Europe continues unabated. This is the one unique, large Christian group that are being murdered. Knowing that they have lost the war, the Nazis are determined to complete their program of mass extermination. This program is but one manifestation of Hitler's plan to attempt from military defeat victory for Nazi principles—the very principles which this war must destroy utterly if we have sought to win."

Describing that in January he had established the War Refugee Board, the President said that the board was entrusted with the urgent duty of executing the Government's immigration policy into practical effect.

Such action, he asserted, "has brought new hope to the oppressed people of Europe."

"From various sources we now know that thousands of people, victims of Nazi cruelty, are being saved as a result of assistance to them and by their exertions in the cause of giving to the people, from whom they or their forebears came, a chance to continue to live consistent with the traditions of the Christian world. It is the fervent hope of all people in all the United Nations that the survivors of these persecutions may find lasting refuge and safety."

The message of welcome received, the President added, had come chiefly to citizens in the form of letters, but the refugees coming into this country would be given a searching examination to establish that they were not [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

A Tribute To A Great American

By Alvin Johnson, of New York, Director, The New School For Social Research

The following appeared as a letter to the New York Times:

Will you grant me space for comment on a great American, Hiram J. Halle, whose death weighs heavily upon the hearts of all of us who knew him?

I write as his particular debtor. In 1933, when Hitler purged the German universities of every true and honest scholar, I conceived the idea of setting up in America a free university manned by the ablest of the German dismissed professors to carry on under our free American skies the noble tradition of Kant, Lessing, Goethe, Heine, threatened with eclipse in its native land. I devised the name the University in Exile and set out to raise the funds required for an initial two-year period. I had enthusiastic response from my board and from many friends; but if anyone thinks it is easy to raise $500,000 a year I wish he would try it.

I had been working for ten days, and had accumulated a fair number of pledges, when my telephone rang, and a strange voice said: "You don't know me, Mr. [illegible] Hiram Halle, a year for two years that you require."

Imagine. You have an idea, an idea as good in your opinion that it can't possibly be realized. Realization comes, just like that, over the telephone. I was able to send cablegrams next day. Twelve scholars, bewildered by the shocking blow from the unspeakable paperhanger, could begin their preparations for a new life in America.

And not to go further into details, the leverage Hiram Halle gave me has enabled me down to the present to bring into America 107 scholars and their families to breathe the free air of America and make their contributions to our expanding intellectual life.

Yet Hiram Halle of the intransbloom, Mrs. Samuel Cohen; and three brothers, William, Max, and Louis. Funeral services took place on June 14, from the home, 2255 St. Famille Street, Rabbi C. Chavn officiating, assisted by Rabbis L. Portnoy and S. Gershenin. Burial was in Chevra Shaas Cemetery. Shiva was at the home.

She is survived by his wife, Hannah Alter; four sons, Jacob, Max, William, of Montreal; Samuel, of Boston, Mass.; three daughters, Mrs. Israel Chatletz, Mrs. Herschel Levine, Mrs. Robert Malay; eleven grandchildren; and one great-grandchild. Funeral services took place from Paperman's, Rabbi Leo Chavn officiating. Burial was in Chavra Shaas cemetery. Shiva was at the home, 9302 Esplanade Avenue.

Bosman, Polly, Leah; eleven grandchildren; and three great grandchildren. Funeral took place from Paperman's, Cantor L. Syrek officiating. Burial was in Beth Yehuda Cemetery. Shiva was at the home, 4540 Laval Avenue.

Jeannette Karber Cleaber, 5724 Mountain Sights, died on June 3, at the Women's General Hospital. She is survived by her husband, Peter; one son, Dr. Herman Cleaber; three daughters, Mrs. Morton Wildstone (Sylvia), of New York; Mrs. Louis Glazer (Josephine), and Carmen Cleaber, of Montreal; six grandchildren; one brother, William Barber, of San Francisco, Cal.; and three sisters, Miss Amelia Karber, Mrs. Max Wohlmann, and Mrs. B. Healing Waters Of Carlsbad Springs Known For Years

In the year 1988 a group of Ottawa men, including members of some of the first families and the first Dominion parliament, carried out the first development at early Carlsbad; the landscaping of a small park, with a resort and bath house for possibly fifty guests, a nearby steeplechase, and a thrice-weekly stage-coach service to Ottawa over the winding pioneer trail through the great pine woods, the first Canada Atlantic Railway being still fourteen years away. Large-scale arrests of Jews continue, with intensive searches in Paris and throughout Slovak and Hlinka States. Hundreds of cases, reported at random, are bound to challenge a physical examination to determine whether they are Jews.

Marriage Annulment Denied Navy Officer In Tragic Case

Justice Bernard Shientag denied in Supreme Court, in New York, a marriage annulment to a Navy officer in a case which he held to be so tragic, so delicately balanced, that he sealed the papers and entitled his opinion: "Anonymous vs. Anonymous."

The couple, both twenty-four years old, were married by civil ceremony on Aug. 10, 1940, agreeing that they would regard this merely as a binding contract to marry, pending the religious ceremony. Three months later, says the New York Herald Tribune, while the bride was assisting in decorating a synagogue for the ceremony which she and her husband looked forward to as the real marriage, a chandelier fell and her spine was injured.

Her husband was tireless in his devotion to her and was at her bedside during most of his leisure time. After the United States entered the war his duties called him away, but his letters were frequent and heart-warming tokens of his unremitting love. Some of these letters, which went far to convince the bride of her ultimate recovery, were read in the Supreme Court while she sat in a wheel chair, weeping silently.

Her parents died, and last summer came the letter from her husband, the possibility of which had been a nightmare to her for almost three years. He had found a woman whom he loved, a young woman free from any physical disability. He asked his wife to release him from their contract. She refused. She wrote to him begging him to wait at least until the end of the war. She had a feeling that when the war ended she would be cured. It was then that her husband instituted his action for annulment.

"The wife," said Justice Shientag in refusing an annulment, "was in a sad plight. She had no one on whom to lean for strength and guidance other than her husband to whom, in full vigor of young womanhood, she had plighted her troth."

Justice Shientag added that he did not condemn the young man.

"It is not intended," he wrote, "to convey the impression that there was anything vicious about this young man. Quite the contrary. For several years he displayed a devotion which left nothing to be desired. Then the weakness of human nature asserted itself."

In a similar case, Justice Shientag noted, the Court of Appeals had made the following observation: "Sickness and misfortune are common to mankind and must be borne with courage and resignation."

Demanding stricter enforcement of anti-Jewish laws, the Paris radio complained that "Frenchmen do not yet realize the full implication of the Jewish danger."

For The Jews—Life Or Death?

By I. F. Stone, In The Nation

This letter, addressed specifically to fellow-newspapermen and to editors the country over, is an appeal for help. The establishment of temporary internment camps for refugees in the United States, vividly named "free ports" by Samuel Grafton of the New York Post, is in danger of bogging down. Every similar proposal here has bogged down until it was too late to save any lives. I have been over a mass of material, some of it confidential, dealing with the plight of the fast-disappearing Jews of Europe and with the fate of suggestions for aiding them, and it is a dreadful story.

Anything newspaperman can write about this in their own papers will help. It will help to save lives, the lives of people like ourselves. I wish I were eloquent, I wish I could put down on paper the picture that comes to me from the restrained and diplomatic language of the documents. As I write, the morning papers carry a dispatch from Lisbon reporting that the "deadline" — the idiom was never more literal—has passed for the Jews of Hungary. It is approaching for the Jews of Bulgaria, where the Nazis yesterday set up a puppet regime.

I need not dwell upon the authenticated horrors of the Nazi internment camps and death chambers for Jews. That is not tragic but a kind of insane horror. It is our part in this which is tragic. The essence of tragedy is not the doing of evil by evil men but the doing of evil by good men, out of weakness, indecision, sloth, inability to act in accordance with what they know to be right. The tragic element in the fate of the Jews of Europe lies in the failure of their friends in the West to shake loose from customary ways and bureaucratic habit, to risk inexpediency and defy prejudice, to be wholehearted, to care as deeply and fight as hard for the big words we use, for justice and for humanity, as the fanatic Nazi does for his master race or the fanatic Jap for his Emperor. A reporter in Washington cannot help seeing this weakness all about him. We are half-hearted about what little [illegible] the Jews of Europe as we are half-hearted [illegible] save the Jews of [illegible] the war began. There is much we could have done since the war began. There are still things we could do today which would give new lives to a few and hope to many. The hope that all is not black in the world for his children can be strong sustenance for a man starving in a camp or entering a gas chamber. But to feel that your friends and allies are wishy-washy folk who mean what they say but haven't got the gumption to live up to it must brew a poisonous despair. When Mr. Roosevelt established the War Refugee Board in January, he said it was "the policy of this government to take all measures within its power . . . consistent with the successful prosecution of the war . . . to rescue the victims of enemy oppression."

The facts are simple. Thanks to the International Red Cross and those good folk the Quakers, thanks to courageous non-Jewish friends in the occupied countries themselves and to intrepid Jews who run a kind of underground railway under Nazi noses, something can still be done to alleviate the suffering of the Jews in Europe and some Jews can still be got out. Even under the White Paper there are still 22,000 immigration visas available for entry in Palestine.

The main problem is to get Jews over the Turkish border without a passport for transit to Palestine. "Free ports" in Turkey are needed, but the Turks, irritated by other pressures from England and the United States, are unwilling to do for Jewish refugees what we ourselves are still unwilling to do, that is, give them a temporary haven. Only an executive order by the President establishing "free ports" in this country can prove to the Turks that we are dealing with them in good faith; under present circumstances they cannot but feel contemptuous of our pleas.

And the longer we delay the fewer Jews there will be left to rescue, the slimmer the chances to get them out. Between 4,000,000 and 5,000,000 European Jews have been killed since August, 1942, when the Nazi extermination campaign began.

There are people here who say the President cannot risk a move of this kind before election. I believe that an insult to the American people. I do not believe any but a few unworthy bigots would object to giving a few thousand refugees a temporary breathing spell in their flight from oppression. It is a question of Mr. Roosevelt's courage and good faith. All he is called upon to do, after all, is what Franco did months ago, yes, Franco. Franco established "free ports," internment camps, months ago for refugees who fled across his border, refugees, let us remember, from his own ally and patron, Hitler. Knowing the Fuhrer's maniacal hatred for Jews, that kindness on Franco's part took considerably more courage than Mr. Roosevelt needs to face a few snorting editorials, perhaps, from the Chicago Tribune. I say "perhaps" because I do not know that even Colonel McCormick would in fact be hostile.

Official Washington's capacity for finding excuses for inaction is endless, and many people in the State and War departments who play a part in this matter can spend months sucking their legalistic thumbs over any problem. So many things that might have been done were attempted too late. A little more than a year ago Sweden offered to take 20,000 Jewish children from occupied Europe if Britain and the United States guaranteed their feeding and after the war repatriation. The British were fairly rapid in this case, [illegible] to get these unfortunate [illegible]

Haven For Europe's Refugees

The New York Herald Tribune says:

The President's press conference statement on the rescue of refugees from Nazi Europe brings some encouraging news. The arrangements for the transfer to a temporary haven at Fort Ontario, New York, of a thousand refugees from overcrowded camps in southern Italy means that this country is undertaking at once its share of responsibility for refugees' care. The fact that camps in Italy are overcrowded means that tens of thousands are escaping. The United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration, supplementing the President's news, reports that since May 1 six refugee centers in the Middle East have been housing 40,500 Greeks and Yugoslavs, mostly women and children, and that the number is expected to swell to 54,000 soon. These centers are to be expanded and new ones built.

The President indicated that a workable escape route is that through Yugoslavia to Italy — 1,800 came out of Yugoslavia last week. This influx taxes facilities in southern Italy and threatens to hamper military activities. Other Mediterranean havens take some, but the overflow, apparently, is great enough to warrant the transfer of a thousand immediately to this country.

The thousand will be admitted outside the regular immigration procedure and given haven here for the duration. "It is contemplated that at the end of the war they will be returned to their homelands," the President wrote. The War Department is to equip Fort Ontario, near Oswego, to receive them, to arrange their transportation from port to camp and take the necessary precautions to see that they remain in camp. The camp will be administered by the War Relocation Board; it will be financed with funds pooled from various government agencies dealing with foreign relief, supplemented, if necessary, from the President's emergency funds.

This news of the escape of driven and persecuted peoples, with its import of new hope and new heart for thousands, is a poignant preface to the coming liberation of millions like them as the armies of freedom batter through the walls around fortress Europe.

the American government, and by that time the situation had worsened to a point that seems to have blocked the whole project. In another case the Bulgarian government offered visas for 1,000 Jews if arrangements could be made within a certain time for their departure. A ship was obtained at once, but it took seven weeks for British officials to get clearance for the project from London, and by that time the time limit had been passed. The records, when they can be published, will show many similar incidents.

The news that the United States had established "free ports" would bring hope to people who have now no hope. It would encourage neutrals to ask [illegible]

[illegible] newspapermen to show the President by their expressions of opinion in their own papers that if he hesitates for fear of an unpleasant political reaction he badly misconstrues the real feelings of the American people.

CAMPS FOR JEWS OF HUNGARY PLACED IN AIR-RAID DISTRICTS

municipal offices, or for bearing "Aryans."

The wholesale internment of Jews began with the arrest of 200,000. In Carpathia, formerly Czech territory, expulsions are in full swing; the Jews of Munkacs (Ukrainerov) and Ungvar (Uzhorod) numbering 14,000 and 10,000 respectively have already been sent to concentration camps. Similar treatment is being meted out to the Jews of Kassa (Kosice). The victims were allowed to take with them one hundred pounds of luggage and sufficient food to last a fortnight.

Those opposing radical anti-Jewish legislation argue that it is working against Hungary's interests with Britain, the United States and even Hungarians in the United States, shocked and alienated by reports of the anti-Jewish excesses.

Unhampered by the crisis, Nazi-appointed officials continued with the implementation of the Nuremberg program against Jews. Jewish police were organized in the Hungarian ghettos, reminiscent of the Jewish police in the Polish ghettos, prior to their liquidation. Budapest newspapers arriving at Geneva told of 600,000 Jews already interned in 29 ghettos, one in Debrecen, Carpathia-Ruthenia, with a population of 9,000 Jews.

In official announcement the government had pointed private that the baptizing of Jews will be considered as "subterfuge" and "constitute at the creation of anti-Jewish legislation."

The newspaper Deutsche Zeitung of Budapest has published a list containing the names of dozens of mixed Hungarian aristocrats allegedly married to Jewesses and charges them with sabotaging the anti-Jewish laws.

Fest, the Budapest newspaper which had proposed "that Hungary's Jews be exchanged for Hungarians nationals in the United States," reports that Hungarian Jewish leaders "have already begun negotiations for the purpose of co-operating with the International Red Cross to facilitate such exchange."

Over one million Hungarians have died, exchanged, or gone into hiding since the Jews.

REFUGEE WHO FOUND VIVICILLIN SON OF SCIENTIST

Enoch, Hamburg," which was founded by his father and which he took over when his father died in 1922.

In Hamburg his firm supplied army munitions to Britain, and when he left Germany he was asked to produce them in London by the International Serum Company whose works were formerly at Norwich. He immediately received a permit to do so.

Dr. Enoch is proud of being a Jew and recalled his bar-mitzvah. He was also an active Zionist for some time in his student days. But later on he ceased to become actively connected with the movement for certain reasons. "I cannot be described as a Zionist or anti-Zionist," he said, "because I fully agree with certain tendencies of Zionism, but I disagree with others."

He has a married sister who lives with her husband in Palestine. She left Germany shortly before he did. "My father," he explained, "was also a well known metallurgist in Germany and was the founder of the Hamburg Serum Works—the first of their kind in Germany." When in Germany Dr. Enoch also worked for some time in the Reich Institute in Frankfort-on-Main.

group to include a reasonable proportion of various categories of persecuted peoples who have fled to Italy.

"You should bear in mind that since these refugees are to be placed in a camp in the United States under appropriate security restrictions, the procedure for the selection of the refugees and arrangements for bringing them here should be as simple and expeditious as possible, unencumbered by any of the usual formalities involved in admitting people to the United States under the immigration laws.

"However, please be sure that the necessary health checks are made to avoid bringing here persons afflicted with any loathsome, dangerous or contagious disease.

"If you encounter any difficulties in arranging for the prompt execution of these refugee plans let me know."

Decay Of The Family

The Jewish Chronicle, of London, England, says:

Long before the present struggle began, the [illegible] of the home were largely superseded by the cinema and motor car, which, during the days of leisure which gave [illegible] scope for family influences to assert themselves, took young and old alike far away from the family hearth. This [illegible] has been immensely emphasized by the exigencies of the war. Families have been broken up by the evacuation of the children, and in the case of Jews, the beautiful religious [illegible] monies, so redolent of the home, and therefore so valuable, came to a sudden stop, replaced, in too many instances, [illegible] best a religionless environment and at worst by something even more destructive. The establishment of child hostels, in many respects admirable, substituted a sort of herd life for that of the family. The equally valuable British restaurant had the same effect. The family table was more and more supplanted, and whole families took to lunching and dining out, leaving the home a mere dormitory and little else besides. As a result of the unsettling influence of the war, a kind of wanderlust has seized many of the population, until [illegible] seem to have acquired not only the tea-shop or restaurant habit but the gipsy habit, too. "Is your journey really necessary?" may have started as an economy slogan; but it was a sign of the times, reflecting a restless craving to be on the move to somewhere, anywhere.

Family life in war-time could not in any case go on as before, and so its ties were loosened, its former controlling power impaired, and its sacredness became a thing of the past. Not long ago a woman broadcaster told of the extraordinary feeling of estrangement experienced by her when her soldier husband came home to her from abroad after his discharge. It was felt by both parties. The old life seemed to have been irretrievably broken. It had to be rebuilt, somehow, if indeed it could!

Of course it may be argued that, after all, these war-time conditions are only temporary and everything will be normal again, once they cease to operate. If so, the obligation to facilitate that reversion to the old ways will make great demands upon statesmanship.

But can we honestly believe that the return to the home and all that it stood for is quite so simple of achievement? The separation, the break-up, so far as the children are concerned, has taken place in their most impressionable and formative years. The wanderlust set up in them and in their elders is not easily to be dislodged. New outlooks and desires have been implanted, and old excitements will not be quickly and readily discarded.

All these things open up a serious [illegible] of the national life, has been impoverished and weakened. The very foundations of the State will thereby be shaken.

For us Jews, if our essential "Jewish family health" is unable to resist, it will mean a progressive deterioration in social and religious attachments, a process closely connected with the notable and disquieting aloofness from the Synagogue, and the even more disturbing increase in intermarriages and in the number of Jewish divorces.

The position cannot be retrieved by superficial improvisations or by mere negative remedies. To suppose, for instance, that it can be improved by the multiplication of new houses equipped with every modern comfort is to underestimate the depth of the trouble; home life and home loyalties can be much harder to find in a mansion than in a hovel.

The same can be said of such solutions as wage and salary adjustments, as improved maternity services and therapy, as broad new avenues and green belts and all the rest of the items which go to make up better standards of living. All these things do not touch the heart of the trouble, which is one of the mind and a disease of the spirit, even as is that other aspect of this problem, the great birthrate decline, which a Commission, under the chairmanship of Lord Simon, is at this moment considering. Dwindling families and family decay are, in fact, but two related facets of a single spiritual whole.

It is one of the difficulties of the problem, indeed, to disentangle the social phenomena which menace the national future — to say which gives rise to which: which is the more prejudicial, how they mutually interact, and where reform should most profitably begin. Until there is more light on these questions there will probably only be piecemeal and often mutually destructive instead of co-ordinated and comprehensive efforts. We have to beware, in this grave matter, of catchpenny solutions and parrot slogans.

The need, on the contrary, is for patient probing of the causes at work before theories for a revival of family life are dished up. But in so immensely important a problem it is not too much to ask that the decay of the family should be made the subject of a searching and authoritative inquiry by social workers and religious leaders of all creeds, with active governmental assistance where necessary, and that the depopulation commission should give special attention to it. At the least, this would show that the nation is alive to the magnitude of the ill which is sapping its chances of survival.

For Jews, however, the need for action is pressing. Here is a state of things which, in the present abnormal conditions, holds a threat of something approaching extinction in the not so distant years. The restoration of the Jewish home to its former glories, which, as our correspondent observes, has been a model for other peoples to emulate, is surely ripe for consideration by a specially summoned communal conference, by the Jewish Ministers' Conference which has long remained somnolent, or, best of all, by the finest brains in the Jewish community equipped with the qualities for sociological analysis and the character and selflessness required for great scientific research.

It is one of the most urgent and vital steps to be taken in work for the post-war community — indeed, for the most vital of them all; for nothing else will, in the long run, count if Jewish family life is shorn of its pleasant vital powers, its spiritual inspiration, and its moral beauty.
